

DEDICATED TO MY FRIEND AND 'EL MONTE GRANDMA'

ZELMA MOLNÁR KLINE

1905-2005

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The most important contributor to my development as a linguist and the final product of the dissertation is my advisor, Judith Aissen. She has always encouraged me to engage in field research and to be creative in my solutions to linguistic puzzles.

Through her own work and her excellence as a teacher and advisor, I learned to think and write precisely. Her generosity with her time and her ability to carefully consider drafts is legendary and my dissertation benefited significantly from her input.

My other committee members also contributed greatly to my dissertation. Jim McCloskey provided important help with the formal aspects of the analysis of resumption. I thank Donka Farkas for her input on the pragmatics of contrastive topic. During the development of that phase of my work, she was very encouraging of my analyses of the data. I also thank her for her encouragement and support during the difficult job search process.

The final committee member, Eva Hajičová, hosted me at the Institute of Formal and Applied Linguistics in Prague in Fall, 2003. Much of the data that provided inspiration for the dissertation was gathered and considered during that time. I thank Eva Hajičová and Petr Sgall for the time they gave me for consultation, as well as their long-distance support during the research and writing of my dissertation.

My stay would not have been the same without the companionship of my ‘office mates’, the departmental secretaries, Anna Kotěšcová and Libuše Brdičková.

This dissertation would, quite literally, not have been possible without the help of my Czech consultants: Jana Hejduková, Věra Kafková, Tomáš Koukolik, Jitka Malíková, Hana Pariser, Kuba Šíma, Karolina Wencelová, and employees at Café Prague in San Francisco. I especially thank Martina Šimová and Kristina Valentinová for their regular help over the past few years. Their patience and careful consideration of the data made this dissertation not only possible, but enjoyable.

My office mates over the past two years, Anya Lunden and Lynsey Wolter, as well as other UC Santa Cruz graduate students, provided invaluable support: Florence Woo, James Isaacs, Pete Alrenga, Vera Griбанov, Emily Manetta and Rodrigo Gutiérrez-Bravo. Lastly, I thank the heart of the Linguistics Dept., Tanya Honig, Department Manager. I appreciate her willingness to help with all problems, both administrative and personal. Most of all I thank her for her friendship.

Finally, none of this would be possible without the love and support of my friends and family. For companionship and therapeutic shoe shopping I thank Michelle Allersma. For making me a part of their family I thank Rosemary McKenna and Kathleen Dillon. Susan Hardenbook and Paul Adrianni have been an integral part of my support system, as well as my Santa Cruz friends: Kora McNaughton, Helen Mayer, Chris Fahrenbach and Ellen O’Hanlon. I thank Stoycho Draganoff for his patience and support during the final throes of the dissertation and, especially, for a great year.